

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

ALI OMAR POLK,

Petitioner,

No. C 10-5529 PJH

v.

ORDER DENYING PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

KATHLEEN DICKINSON, Warden,

Respondent.

Before the court is the petition for writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254, filed by state prisoner, Ali Omar Polk ("Polk"). Having reviewed the parties' papers, the record, and having carefully considered their arguments and the relevant legal authorities, the court DENIES the petition.

BACKGROUND

A. Procedural Background

In 2007, a jury in the Alameda County Superior Court convicted Polk of second-degree murder, possession of a firearm by a felon, and several firearm enhancements. The court sentenced Polk to fifteen years to life in prison on the murder conviction, and added twenty-five years for one of the firearm enhancements, resulting in an aggregate sentence of forty years to life in prison.

Polk appealed to the California Court of Appeal, which affirmed his conviction and sentence on May 29, 2009. The California Supreme Court denied review on September 9, 2009. Polk filed the instant federal habeas petition on December 6, 2010.

B. Factual Background

On June 23, 2005, Polk shot the victim, DeAndrew Smith ("Smith"), while Smith was sitting on the front porch of his Oakland residence, which he shared with several people. Immediately prior to the shooting, Smith was sitting on the porch with Dajuan Gross ("Dajuan") when Polk walked up.¹ Dajuan recognized Polk from the neighborhood, and was aware that Polk and Smith had had a dispute recently. Dajuan whispered to Smith, "Here he come," as Polk approached.

According to Dajuan, Polk walked up the front steps and demanded money from Smith, to which Smith responded, "You'll get it when I get it." Dajuan heard the sound of a bullet being chambered in a gun, and got up and tried to go inside the house. As he did, he heard three or four shots, turned, and saw Smith lying on the porch. He heard a second series of shots, after which Dajuan ran to a neighbor's house and called 911. In addition to Dajuan, the shooting was also witnessed by Dajuan's sister, Ebonique, who was with Dajuan and Smith on the porch when Polk came over. When the police arrived, Smith was semi-conscious with several bullet wounds. He fell into a coma and died several days later.

Prosecution Case

At trial, in addition to the above testimony from Dajuan, the prosecution presented the following evidence in the form of testimony from witnesses and from prior statements witnesses provided to police officers after the shooting.² Smith was a close friend of Dajuan's and was living at the Oakland residence, which apparently belonged to Dajuan's grandparents, the Keys ("the Keys residence"). Smith had apparently been dealing drugs from the residence. Two days prior to the shooting, Ebonique heard Smith and Polk ¹Eyewitness Ebonique Gross, Dajuan's sister, testified that another man, "Taco," was also present on the porch at the time of the shooting. As discussed below, her testimony was contrary to Dajuan's.

²Soon after the shooting, several of Smith's friends and neighbors gave statements to the police. However, at trial, many of the witnesses, including Ebonique, recanted or "forgot" their prior statements.

1 arguing about what she understood to be prostitutes. Polk then told Smith not to be there 2 when he returned, and drove off in a Jaguar. The next day, the day prior to the shooting, 3 Ebonique saw Polk across the street from the Keys residence. She approached Polk and 4 asked him to sell her drugs, to which Polk responded that he wasn't "over here" for that, 5 and "you know what I'm over here doin'." Exh. 8 at 8. Ebonique subsequently went into 6 the Keys house and told Smith about her interaction with Polk.

7 The next day, the day of the shooting, Ebonique stated that she was on the porch 8 with Dajuan and Smith, and that none of them had a weapon. She observed Polk come 9 over and demand money from Smith, claiming that Smith had damaged his car. Smith 10 denied damaging the car, and, regarding the car, told Polk to "[a]sk one a your females." 11 Id. at 9. Polk again demanded money, which Smith refused. Polk then shot Smith several 12 times, ran out of the yard, passing a neighbor, Zachary Thompson. Thompson asked Polk 13 what had happened, and Polk told him not to worry about it because he "just shot in the 14 air."

15 At trial, however, Ebonique changed the above story she told officers immediately 16 after the shooting. Initially, when called as a prosecution witness at trial, she refused to 17 testify. R.T. 785-86. The trial court held her in contempt and ordered her jailed for the 18 night. As she left the courtroom, she told Polk, "I'm not going to tell on you, dude." R.T.
19 989-90. Ebonique subsequently agreed to testify the next day. At trial, she testified, 20 contrary to her prior statement, that she left to go to the store shortly before the actual 21 shooting and did not witness the shooting. She also testified that prior to the shooting, 22 another man, "Taco," was present on the porch and that both Smith and Taco had 23 weapons at the time. Additionally, Ebonique testified that Smith had threatened Polk with a 24 shotgun in the days immediately prior to the shooting.

25 Contrary to Ebonique's trial testimony, her brother, Dajuan denied knowing anyone 26 named "Taco." R.T. 344. He also denied observing Smith with a weapon at the time of the 27 shooting. R.T. 320-21, 344-46.

1 The prosecution also introduced prior statements and/or testimony from neighbors 2 Cindy Williams and Zachary Thompson, and from Jamena Levi, the mother of Smith's 3 children. Williams testified that the night before the shooting, she saw Polk holding a 4 shotgun and talking to a known drug dealer outside of her house. On the evening of the 5 shooting, Williams attested she saw Polk running down the street, dressed in black, and 6 putting something in his waistband. She went outside and down to the Keys house, where 7 she saw people congregating and Smith lying on the porch.

8 Thompson invoked the Fifth Amendment when he was asked about the shooting 9 while on the witness stand. After the trial court ordered him to answer the questions, he 10 denied knowing anything about the shooting, but admitted giving a statement to police soon 11 after the shooting. In his recorded statement, which was introduced at trial, Thompson 12 stated that he was walking near the Keys residence on the night of the shooting, heard four 13 or five gunshots, and then saw Polk running down the street dressed in black clothing.
14 When Thompson asked what happened, Polk said, "only in the air." Thompson then 15 walked around the corner, observed Smith lying on the porch, and "put two and two 16 together." Exh. 9.

17 Smith's children's mother, Levi, testified that she was driving to the Keys residence 18 when she heard shots fired. R.T. 512-13. She testified that she had seen Smith the day 19 before he was killed, and that he was acting strangely, "like he knew something was going 20 to happen." R.T. 545. After hearing the shots, Levi saw people running, including "Taco," 21 but she did not observe anyone with a weapon. R.T. 548, 558. Her cousin, Zachary 22 Thompson, told her that Smith had been shot, and that he saw Polk running from the 23 scene. Levi had previously heard from some of Smith's friends that Polk and Smith were 24 having a problem. R.T. 545.

25 In addition to the above, the prosecution also introduced evidence that suggested 26 Polk was a pimp, and that the shooting was triggered by an argument regarding Polk's 27 pimping activities.

1 During its closing argument, the prosecution argued that there were a number of 2 factors that demonstrated that the shooting was intentional and deliberate, and that Polk 3 had not acted out of self defense. It pointed out numerous inconsistencies in Polk's
4 testimony, and argued that between eyewitnesses Dajuan and Ebonique, Dajuan's 5 testimony was more believable because unlike Ebonique, he had not altered his story from 6 the time of the shooting until trial.

7 Defense Case

8 Polk was the primary witness and testified on his own behalf at trial. He admitted to 9 shooting Smith, but claimed that it was in self-defense. He also admitted that he had two 10 felony convictions for selling drugs, that he had been on probation at the time of the 11 shooting, and that his probation conditions prohibited him from possessing firearms and 12 from entering Oakland's 79th Avenue neighborhood, where the Keys residence was 13 located.

14 Polk testified that he grew up in the Oakland Hills neighborhood, but spent a lot of 15 time on 79th Avenue in Oakland. He admitted that he often bought drugs from friends in 16 the area for resale, and that he earned approximately $3,000 per month selling drugs. He 17 also testified that he was an "executive producer," of a music company, admitted that he 18 did not pay taxes on his earnings, and stated that he drove a green Jaguar and a Harley 19 Davidson motorcycle, which had been purchased by his mother. He admitted to fathering 20 four children with three women and that he had never married.

21 Polk testified that he had gone to Smith's house a few days before the shooting, and 22 that Smith was sitting on the porch with a shotgun, making strange comments. Polk 23 returned to the 79th Avenue area the next day to sell drugs, and brought a handgun for 24 protection. He went to the Keys house, where he claimed that Smith became hostile, and 25 grabbed a shotgun, and asked Polk what he was laughing at. Polk and Smith argued about 26 who had the right to sell drugs in the neighborhood. Polk testified that Smith then pointed 27 the shotgun at him and followed him to his car, shooting him with shotgun pellets that Polk 28

1 claimed “didn’t hurt.” Polk claimed that there were shotgun marks on his Jaguar.³

2 Polk testified that soon after, a mutual friend called and advised him that Smith had 3 offered to pay him $5,000 to fix his car and end the dispute. Polk asserted that he returned 4 to the 79th Avenue neighborhood the next morning, thinking that the dispute was resolved.
5 He sold drugs for a couple hours, left, and returned again that evening to sell more drugs 6 and to talk to Smith. He claimed he was wearing his typical dark “uniform” for selling drugs.

7 When Polk arrived at the Keys house on the evening of June 23, 2005, he testified 8 that Smith, Dajuan, and “Taco,” were sitting on the front porch, and that Smith had a 9 shotgun on his lap. He attested that when he asked Smith for the agreed-upon money, 10 Smith threatened that they were going to kill him and that he was going to be taken out in a 11 “body bag.” He stated that both Taco and Dajuan stood up, holding handguns, showing 12 support for Smith, and saying “fuck you, Nigga.” Polk testified that out of fear for his life, he 13 pulled out his gun, removed the safety, and fired at Smith. He explained that when he 14 encountered Thompson en route to his car, he tried to calm him by telling him that he shot 15 in the air.

16 Polk explained that he did not call the police because he believed someone else 17 would, and also asserted that he did not believe he had killed Smith.

18 Polk then drove to a girlfriend’s house, packed his Jaguar with clothes, and lived in 19 motels the next ten months because he feared friends would be angry at him for killing 20 Smith. He learned from a friend that Smith had died, and that mutual friends wanted to kill 21 him. He testified that it “never entered his mind” that police wanted to speak to him 22 regarding the shooting, and stated that he sold the gun he used to shoot Smith because he 23 needed money.

24 Polk believed that he and Smith had been manipulated by mutual friends. He also 25 insisted on cross-examination that he had never been a pimp.

26
27

³Police officers testified that they found no such marks on the Jaguar after they 28 inspected it following Smith’s murder.

1 In its closing argument, the defense argued that Ebonique's version of the shooting 2 was more credible than Dajuan's. It contended that Dajuan lied, and that Dajuan, Smith, 3 and Taco had weapons at the time of the shooting, and that it was therefore three (Dajuan, 4 Smith, and Taco) versus one (Polk), and that it was reasonable for Polk to shoot Smith in 5 self defense.

6 On the fifth day of deliberations, the jury advised the trial court that they agreed that 7 Polk was guilty of murder, but that they could not agree as to the degree. In response, the 8 prosecution elected to dismiss the first degree murder charge. That same day, the jury 9 convicted Polk of second degree murder.

10 ISSUES

11 Polk raises three claims for federal habeas relief, including:

12 (1) that his Fifth, Sixth, and Fourteenth Amendment due process, equal protection, 13 and fair trial rights were violated when the prosecution peremptorily challenged eight 14 potential jurors on the basis of their gender;

15 (2) that his Fifth, Sixth, and Fourteenth Amendment due process, equal protection, 16 and fair trial rights were violated when the trial court failed to adequately investigate 17 reported juror misconduct; and 18 (3) that the cumulative effect of the errors violated his constitutional rights.

19 STANDARD OF REVIEW

20 A district court may not grant a petition challenging a state conviction or sentence on 21 the basis of a claim that was reviewed on the merits in state court unless the state court's 22 adjudication of the claim: "(1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an 23 unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the 24 Supreme Court of the United States; or (2) resulted in a decision that was based on an 25 unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court 26 proceeding." 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). The first prong applies both to questions of law and to 27 mixed questions of law and fact, Williams (Terry) v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 407–09, (2000), 28

1 while the second prong applies to decisions based on factual determinations, Miller–El v.
2 Cockrell, 537 U.S. 322, 340 (2003).

3 A state court decision is “contrary to” Supreme Court authority, that is, falls under 4 the first clause of § 2254(d)(1), only if “the state court arrives at a conclusion opposite to 5 that reached by [the Supreme] Court on a question of law or if the state court decides a 6 case differently than [the Supreme] Court has on a set of materially indistinguishable facts.”
7 Williams (Terry), 529 U.S. at 412–13. A state court decision is an “unreasonable 8 application of” Supreme Court authority, falling under the second clause of § 2254(d)(1), if it 9 correctly identifies the governing legal principle from the Supreme Court's decisions but 10 “unreasonably applies that principle to the facts of the prisoner's case.” Id. at 413. The 11 federal court on habeas review may not issue the writ “simply because that court concludes 12 in its independent judgment that the relevant state-court decision applied clearly 13 established federal law erroneously or incorrectly.” Id. at 411. Rather, the application must 14 be “objectively unreasonable” to support granting the writ. Id. at 409.

15 A state court's determination that a claim lacks merit precludes federal habeas relief 16 so long as “fairminded jurists could disagree” on the correctness of the state court's 17 decision. Harrington v. Richter, 131 S.Ct. 770, 786-87 (2011) (citing Yarborough v.
18 Alvarado, 541 U.S. 652, 664 (2004)). “[E]valuating whether a rule application [i]s 19 unreasonable requires considering the rule's specificity. The more general the rule, the 20 more leeway courts have in reaching outcomes in case-by-case determinations.” Id. “As a 21 condition for obtaining habeas corpus [relief] from a federal court, a state prisoner must 22 show that the state court's ruling on the claim being presented in federal court was so 23 lacking in justification that there was an error well understood and comprehended in 24 existing law beyond any possibility for fairminded disagreement.” Id.

25 Under 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(2), a state court decision “based on a factual 26 determination will not be overturned on factual grounds unless objectively unreasonable in 27 light of the evidence presented in the state-court proceeding.” Miller–El, 537 U.S. at 340.

Review under § 2254(d)(1) is limited to the record that was before the state court that adjudicated the claim on the merits. Cullen v. Pinholster, 131 S.Ct. 1388, 1398 (2011).

DISCUSSION

I. Prosecution's Use of Peremptory Challenges

In his petition, Polk argues that his fair jury trial, due process, and equal protection rights were violated when the prosecution peremptorily challenged several prospective female jurors on the basis of their gender.

A. Legal Framework for Batson Challenges

The use of peremptory challenges by either the prosecution or defendant to exclude cognizable groups from a jury may violate the Equal Protection Clause. See Georgia v. McCollum, 505 U.S. 42, 55-56 (1992). The Supreme Court first held that the Equal Protection Clause forbids the challenging of potential jurors solely on account of their race, see Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79, 89 (1986), and later extended this protection to challenges solely based on gender. See J.E.B. v. Alabama ex rel. T.B., 511 U.S. 127, 130-43 (1994); see also United States v. DeGross, 960 F.2d 1433, 1438-39 (9th Cir. 1992) (en banc) (same); United States v. Omoruyi, 7 F.3d 880, 881 (9th Cir. 1993) (peremptory challenge against unmarried female venirepersons for fear that they would be attracted to defendant violated defendant's right to equal protection as challenge was gender-based). A party may raise an equal protection claim on behalf of a juror excluded because of the juror's gender, regardless of whether the party and the excluded juror share the same gender. See Powers v. Ohio, 499 U.S. 400, 406 (1991); see also McCollum, 505 U.S. at 56 (Equal Protection Clause applies to criminal defendant's, as well as prosecutor's, exercise of peremptory challenges).

Batson permits prompt rulings on objections to peremptory challenges under a three-step process. Id. First, the defendant must make a prima facie case that the prosecutor exercised peremptory challenges on the basis of gender "by showing that the

1 totality of the relevant facts gives rise to an inference of discriminatory purpose.” Id. at 93-2 94. As for the second Batson step, if a prima facie case is made, the burden shifts to the 3 prosecutor to articulate a gender-neutral explanation for striking the jurors in question.
4 Batson, 476 U.S. at 97; Wade v. Terhune, 202 F.3d 1190, 1195 (9th Cir. 2000). Third and 5 finally under Batson, the trial court must determine whether the defendant has carried his 6 burden of proving purposeful discrimination. 476 U.S. at 98; Wade, 202 F.3d at 1195.

7 B. Background re Polk’s Batson Claim

8 During voir dire, the prosecutor exercised peremptory challenges against eight 9 women and four men to select the jury. The prosecutor used his first three peremptory 10 challenges to eliminate female jurors Anne Storm, Judith Hollis, and Susan Amster. The 11 prosecutor then used his fourth peremptory challenge against a male, and his fifth 12 challenge against a woman, Dr. Malini Singh. The prosecutor proceeded to use his next 13 three challenges against male jurors. The prosecutor’s last four challenges were against 14 female jurors Abigail Kingkaiser, Lisa Montgomery, and Denise Gonzales from the jury 15 panel, and Betsy Tabraham as an alternate. Ultimately, the jury selected consisted of ten 16 men and two women, and the three alternates consisted of two men and one woman. A 17 more detailed description of the jury selection follows.

18 1. Trial Court Proceedings and Rulings

19 20 Prior to jury selection and trial, the parties discussed the jury selection procedures to 21 be utilized by the court. The court suggested that to the extent the parties wanted to bring 22 a Batson motion, they should advise the court that they have a motion, and the court would 23 subsequently hear arguments outside of the presence of the jury. 3 R.T. 64-65.

24 On August 13, 2007, jury selection commenced with approximately 160 prospective 25 jurors. Jurors at Polk’s trial were selected based on their answers to a thirteen-page juror 26 questionnaire followed by voir dire. 3 R.T. 50-51, 62-65, 1 SRT 10. The voir dire 27 proceedings commenced with twelve prospective jurors who were called at random. Both 28

1 the court and the parties questioned the jurors. As noted, the prosecutor used his first 2 three peremptory challenges to strike three of the four women in that group, including 3 prospective jurors Storm, Hollis, and Amster. After the prosecutor challenged Amster, 4 defense counsel indicated to the court that she desired to make a Batson motion, and 5 agreed that it could be argued later outside the presence of the prospective jurors in 6 accordance with the procedure the court had previously discussed with the parties. 1 SRT 7 194-95. Defense counsel thereafter renewed her motion after the prosecution challenged 8 two additional jurors, including one man and then another woman, Singh, and argument 9 was similarly deferred until later. 1 SRT 206, 221.

10 The prosecution then challenged three male jurors, at which point defense counsel 11 advised the court that she was “withdraw[ing] the motion, at this time, given the last three 12 challenges, but if the issues comes up,” she was “reserv[ing her] right to bring it up again.” 13 1 SRT 266. The trial court subsequently clarified that the defense was withdrawing the 14 Batson/Wheeler motion as follows:

15 Court: You had intended to make a motion to discharge this panel on the ground of 16 so-called Wheeler, I know you know that.

17 Reporter: [Defense counsel] nods head.

18 Court: And Batson, and that is using peremptory challenges for an improper 19 discriminatory purpose to exclude women.

20 Defense counsel: Yes, sir.

21 Court: But you have chosen not to make that motion.

22 Defense counsel: I have chosen not to make that motion or request any other 23 Batson/Wheeler remedies, which are available under case law.

24 Court: Okay. I just want it to be real clear that that’s your position, so I don’t have to 25 make any decision.

26
27 1 SRT 267-68.
28

1 The weekend ensued, and jury selection continued the following Monday. After the 2 prosecution exercised its peremptory challenges to strike three additional female jurors, 3 Denise Gonzalez, Abigail Kingkaiser, and Elizabeth Montgomery, the defense notified the 4 court that it was renewing its Batson motion, and the court again deferred argument. 2 5 SRT 277, 284, 285. Shortly thereafter, following selection of the jury but prior to the 6 selection of the alternates, defense counsel asked the court to approach the bench. 2 SRT 7 298. The court inquired regarding the Batson motion, and defense counsel again stated 8 that it was withdrawn. 2 SRT 298.

9 Selection of the alternate jurors commenced, and the prosecution struck another 10 female juror, Betsey Tabraham. 2 SRT 308.

11 After the entire jury selection was complete, the court queried defense counsel 12 regarding the status of the Batson motion. 2 SRT 326.

14 Court: I just want the record to be very clear, I think it probably is, but let's just make 15 it clearer, Ms. Beles. At one point, when [the prosecutor] excused the juror, who 16 happened to be a woman you said that you had a motion - the same as before - you were renewing the motion, and I said we'll deal with it a little later. I knew what it was. You later said the motion was withdrawn. Did I understand correctly?

17 Defense counsel: Yes, your Honor. At the time [the prosecutor] had – 18 Court: That's okay.

19 Defense counsel: – kicked two women, and I'm withdrawing it at this time, because 20 I am fully aware of appellate law that indicates I must exhaust my challenges before Batson/Wheeler would stand, and I am withdrawing it at this time.

21 Court: I don't think so.

22 Defense counsel: There's law about it. Well, I don't – I'm – that's it. I'm done. I'm 23 withdrawing it.

24 Court: Okay. All right.

25 2 SRT 326-27.

26 Subsequently, the prosecutor, concerned about the record and defense counsel's 27 reasons for withdrawing the motion, interjected as follows, and as a result, defense counsel 28

1 agreed to go forward with the motion.

2 Prosecutor: Your Honor, before we leave this issue, I just – I'm a little concerned 3 about the state of the record now, because counsel has indicated that - and if I'm 4 mistaken, I'm sure counsel will correct me, but it seems as though the only reason 5 why the motion is being withdrawn is based on counsel's belief that she must fully 6 exhaust all her challenges, and I don't know if – I'd prefer that if [defense counsel] 7 feels this is appropriate that she state, regardless of whether or not that is the law, 8 that she is withdrawing those challenges.

9 Defense counsel: Okay. Well, then, fine. I'll just make the motion.

10 Court: Okay.

11 Defense counsel: Fine, if we want to do it this way, fine. [Prosecutor], last week, the 12 first peremptory was - may I say the names.

13 Court: Let's start over. What you're doing is, you're asking that the jury panel be 14 discharged and that, conveniently, we have not sworn the jury, so jeopardy hasn't 15 attached, so we're kind of in the clear on this any way you look at it. You're making 16 a motion to dismiss this panel all together, and it's your assertion that [the 17 prosecutor] has been systematically excluding a particular class of jurors, that is, 18 women.

19 Defense counsel: That is true, your Honor.

20 Court: I'm familiar with who's been excused, and the record is pretty clear on that.
21 And my notes show that the order in which the people [the prosecutor] excused 22 were of the following gender, and I'm going in the order of people excused: woman, 23 woman, woman, man, woman, man, man, man, woman, woman, woman.

24 Defense counsel: Accurate.

25 Court: And then a woman alternate.

26 Defense counsel: Accurate.

27 Court: Okay.

28 Defense counsel: So moved.

2 SRT 327-29.

The trial court then found that Polk had not made a prima facie case for systematic exclusion of females from the jury. 2 SRT 329. It noted that there were two women on the jury, along with an additional female alternate juror. The court found specifically as follows:

Two on the jury, one alternate. Let's face it. Interestingly enough, in this particular type of motion we're dealing with a situation where it's an inherent 50/50. It's pretty much an even split, generally, between men and women. And the simple fact that the numbers aren't exactly 50/50, I don't think constitutes a prima facie showing that there's been a discriminatory practice here in the use of peremptory challenges. While there are more women excused than men, [the prosecutor] has excused a number of men as well, and there are women on the jury, although there is certainly a distinct majority of men. But I don't find that there's been a prima facie showing, so I don't feel that there's any reason to call upon [the prosecutor] to explain his use of peremptories, but I'll give you the opportunity if you want it.

2 SRT 329.

The prosecutor subsequently elected to put his reasons on the record for exercising his peremptory challenges as to the challenged jurors. Before doing so, though, he clarified the specific jurors for whom the defense was making the Batson motion as follows:

Prosecutor: Two things, Judge. First I would like to make sure that I have the correct jurors for which [defense counsel] is making this motion. I have indicated Ms. Amster and Ms. Singh from yesterday.

Court: You mean Thursday.

Prosecutor: I'm sorry?

Court: Thursday.

Prosecutor: Yes, Yes, I'm sorry.

Court: Our last court date.

Prosecutor: Thursday, Your Honor. And today the motion was made after I excused, I believe, two other jurors.

Defense counsel: Kingkaiser and then Montgomery.

Prosecutor: And Ms. Montgomery, and so there are four jurors at issue, if you will. And for the first two, Your Honor, my questionnaires are up in my office, and I would like to review those before I state my reasons as to why. I can do it all together – all four jurors together, or I could just handle Ms. Kingkaiser and Ms. Montgomery, and we can handle the other two at a later time. But before I address jurors Amster and Singh, I would need to get those questionnaires.

2 SRT 329-30.

1 The court then recessed for the prosecutor to obtain and review the questionnaires.
2 Following the recess, the court asked defense counsel for argument on the Batson/Wheeler 3 motion, to which defense counsel responded as follows.

4 Defense counsel: Your Honor, upon further reflection, I had said something prior to 5 the break regarding exhaustion of peremptory challenges. I do not stand by that 6 argument, but I did make my Wheeler/Batson motion, and I do not stand by that as 7 a basis of law, so I should stand by my motion. The court has ruled there's no prima 8 facie case, and whatever the prosecution wants to do at this point is neither here nor 9 there for me.

8 Court: [Prosecutor], did I understand correctly that even though you don't have to, 9 I'm not requiring you to, you want to make a record on the use of those 10 peremptories?

10 Prosecutor: If I may, Your Honor.

11 Court: Sure, go ahead.

12 2 SRT 331.

14 At that point, the prosecutor explained his reasons for striking jurors Amster, Singh, 15 Kingkaiser, and Montgomery, which are discussed in detail below. 2 SRT 331-35. The trial 16 court did not comment on the explanations given by the prosecution presumably because 17 the court had already found that the defense's Batson motion did not set forth a prima facie 18 case of gender bias.

19 2. State Appellate Court Proceedings and Decision

20 Polk appealed the trial court's ruling on his Batson motion to the state appellate 21 courts. In his opening brief before the California Court of Appeal, Polk noted that during 22 voir dire, the defense "made a Wheeler/Batson motion focused on four female jurors," 23 including Amster, Singh, Kingkaiser, and Montgomery. Exh. 3 at 55 (emphasis added).
24 Polk argued that the trial court erred in concluding that he failed to set forth a prima facie 25 case of group bias on the basis of gender. He contended that the fact that such a large 26 percentage of the prosecutor's peremptory challenges were against women tended to show 27 group bias or intentional gender stereotyping. Polk also asserted that the California Court 28

1 of Appeal should utilize comparative juror analysis since the prosecutor articulated reasons
2 for his challenges. Exh. 3 at 59 n. 17. Polk contended that the prosecutor's proffered 3 reasons suggested pretext.

4 The California Court of Appeal upheld the trial court's determination that Polk failed 5 to establish a prima facie case for group bias on the basis of gender. At the outset, the 6 court noted that:

7 while defense counsel did ask the court to determine whether the prosecutor 8 was exercising his peremptory challenges in a discriminatory fashion, the 9 motion was half-hearted at best. Defense counsel withdrew her motion no 10 less than three times, and she only made it when the court asked her yet again whether she wanted to pursue it. Defense counsel's reluctance is telling.

11 The appellate court further found that because the prosecutor exercised several 12 peremptory challenges against men - in addition to the ones he exercised against women - 13 "[t]here was no blanket policy of exclusion of women." The court reasoned that the type of 14 gender discrimination alleged by Polk was problematic because "[s]ince all jurors are either 15 men or women, an attorney's peremptory challenges inevitably will apply to at least half of 16 one gender or the other. Given this situation, it is reasonable to accept a relatively higher 17 percentage of challenges to a given gender without giving rise to an inference of 18 discrimination." Additionally, the court concluded that the fact that the prosecutor utilized 19 eight out of twelve of his peremptory challenges against women did not establish a prima 20 facie case of discrimination. It noted that the California Supreme Court had held that such 21 numerical disparities were insufficient.

22 Finally, the court declined to employ comparative juror analysis since the trial court 23 ruled that Polk failed to make out a prima facie case based on Batson's first step. In 24 support, it relied on cases from the California Supreme Court suggesting that although such 25 analysis was appropriate at the third step of the analysis, it had "little or no use" at the first 26 stage.

27 Polk subsequently petitioned for review before the California Supreme Court, again 28

1 arguing that “an inference of group bias was made here as to all four women, especially 2 given the conspicuous percentage of peremptory challenges against women (eight of 3 twelve) and the conspicuous lack of women on the jury (three of fifteen).” Exh. 5 at 12.
4 Citing to the United States Supreme Court’s decision in Miller-El v. Dretke (“Miller-El II”), 5 545 U.S. 231, 240-45 (2005), Polk further argued that the California Court of Appeal erred 6 when it refused to employ comparative juror analysis at stage one given that the prosecutor 7 had provided reasons for his challenges. As noted above, the California Supreme Court 8 summarily denied review.

9 C. Polk’s Federal Habeas Petition

10 1. Enlargement/Expansion of Scope of Claim

11 At the outset, the court notes that Polk attempts to enlarge the scope of his Batson
12 claim before this court. Before the trial court and the state appellate courts, Polk’s 13 Wheeler/Batson motion clearly concerned four prospective jurors - Amster, Singh, 14 Kingkaiser, and Montgomery. Given defense counsel’s confusion and indecisiveness 15 regarding the Batson motion, the prosecutor clarified on the record that this was the case 16 prior to offering explanations regarding his peremptory challenges, and defense counsel 17 agreed and never suggested that the Batson motion focused on other prospective jurors.
18 Additionally, as noted above, in his appellate briefs before the California Court of Appeal 19 and the California Supreme Court, Polk explicitly recognized that his Batson motion 20 focused on the above four jurors.
21

22 Now, for the first time in his federal habeas petition, Polk suggests that the 23 prosecutor “inferred (incorrectly)” that only those four prospective jurors were at issue.
24 Petition at 17. He further notes that the prosecutor did not offer any explanation for his 25 decisions to eliminate jurors Storm, Hollis, Gonzalez, or Tabraham, and suggests that the 26 state courts erred in failing to ascertain whether there was a gender-neutral basis in the 27 record for the elimination of those prospective jurors and for failing to “review the 28

1 circumstances surrounding the challenges.” Petition at 19. However, that was clearly 2 because the defense did not assert that its Batson motion was based on the challenges to 3 those jurors. Moreover, the state trial and appellate courts did not review the prosecutor’s 4 explanations regarding any of the jurors since the state courts determined that Polk failed 5 to set forth a prima facie case at step one.

6 The court has addressed the attempted enlargement in greater detail below in its 7 discussion of the role of comparative juror analysis in this case.

8 2. Necessity/Role of Comparative Jury Analysis

10 In this case, the California Court of Appeal specifically declined to conduct a 11 comparative analysis of jurors, concluding that such analysis was not required at step one 12 of the Batson test. Polk argues that the appellate court’s reasons for concluding that a 13 prima facie case had not been made were unreasonable, and that comparative jury 14 analysis was required given the fact that the prosecutor in this case articulated reasons for 15 the challenges.

16 The state spends the majority of its opposition brief arguing that the state courts 17 were not required to conduct a comparative juror analysis, and neither is this court. It 18 argues that the state court’s conclusion that Polk failed to make out a prima facie case was 19 reasonable, and that the state appellate court’s decision not to utilize comparative juror 20 analysis was not unreasonable. It notes that under state law, comparative juror analysis is 21 only appropriate at the third stage - and not the first stage. It also argues that even though 22 the Ninth Circuit has held that comparative juror analysis is required in a step one inquiry, 23 there is no United States Supreme Court law requiring comparative juror analysis at that 24 stage.

25 In Boyd v. Newland, the Ninth Circuit held that “under the clearly established 26 Supreme Court precedent of Batson, comparative juror analysis is an important tool that 27 courts should utilize on appeal when assessing a defendant’s plausible Batson claim.” 467 28

1 F.3d 1139, 1150 (9th Cir. 2006). In reaching this decision, the court in Boyd suggested that 2 a comparative juror analysis should be undertaken even in circumstances where the trial 3 court ruled that the defendant failed to make a prima facie showing at the first step of the 4 Batson analysis. Id. at 1148-49 (holding that because comparative juror analysis assists a 5 court in determining whether the totality of the circumstances gives rise to an inference of 6 discrimination, this analysis is called for on appeal even when the trial court ruled that the 7 defendant failed to make a prima facie showing at the first step of the Batson analysis); see 8 also Crittenden v. Ayers, 624 F.3d 943, 956 (9th Cir. 2010) (employing a comparative juror 9 analysis for the first time in federal habeas proceedings to find that the defendant made a 10 prima facie showing). The Boyd court's decision was based on the United States Supreme 11 Court's decision in Miller El II, 545 U.S. at 240-45. See Boyd, 467 F.3d at 1150, 1151 12 (noting that "Miller-El II makes comparative juror analysis a centerpiece of the Batson 13 analysis").

14 Contrary to the state's arguments otherwise, it is apparent to this court that the Ninth 15 Circuit's interpretation of Miller-El II (which this court is required to follow) mandates 16 comparative juror analysis in this case, and also that this court conclude that the state 17 court's failure to conduct its own comparative analysis of seated jurors with excused jurors 18 in conducting its analysis of petitioner's Batson claim was contrary to federal law. See 19 Boyd, 467 F.3d at 1149; Kesser v. Cambra, 465 F.3d 351, 358 (9th Cir. 2006). The state 20 court's unreasonable application of clearly established United States Supreme Court 21 precedent in failing to conduct a comparative analysis of the seated jurors with the excused 22 jurors requires this court to examine Polk's Batson claim de novo. See Panetti v.
23 Quarterman, 551 U.S. 930, 953-54 (2007) (when a state court's adjudication of a claim "is 24 dependent on an antecedent unreasonable application of federal law," a federal court must 25 "resolve the claim without the deference AEDPA otherwise requires"); see also Johnson v.
26 Finn, 665 F.3d 1063, 1068-69 (9th Cir. 2011) (where the state court uses the wrong 27 standard for reviewing a Batson claim, the state court's findings are not entitled to 28

1 deference and the federal court reviews the claim de novo).

2 Following the Supreme Court's decision in Miller-El II, the Ninth Circuit has reiterated 3 in numerous cases that where the state courts have failed to engage in a comparative juror 4 analysis, this court must undertake such analysis de novo rather than remand the case to 5 the state courts to do so. Green v. Lamarque, 532 F.3d 1028, 1030-31 (9th Cir. 2008) 6 (citing Miller-El II, 545 U.S. at 241; Kesser, 465 F.3d. at 356-58, 360). Additionally, the 7 Ninth Circuit has held that where the state court record does not provide an adequate basis 8 for the federal habeas court to determine the prosecutor's reasons for striking the jurors, an 9 evidentiary hearing is required. See Love v. Scribner, 278 Fed. Appx. 714, 718 (9th Cir.
10 2008); Paulino v. Castro, 371 F.3d 1083, 1092 (9th Cir. 2004).

11 Here, Polk concedes that an evidentiary hearing is not required for this court's 12 comparative juror analysis because the record contains the prosecutor's articulated 13 reasons for challenging prospective jurors Amster, Singh, Kingkaiser, and Montgomery.
14 However, as noted above, he simultaneously complains for the first time in these federal 15 habeas proceedings that the state court should have required the prosecution to provide 16 explanations for its challenges to Storm, Hollis, Gonzales, and Betsy Tabraham as well.
17 Polk does not suggest that an evidentiary hearing is required, though, based on the 18 absence of reasons in the record regarding those challenges. Nevertheless, given the 19 Ninth Circuit's holdings regarding this court's duty to develop the record where the 20 prosecution's reasons are absent, the court is required to address the issue.

21 The court finds that had Polk's Batson motion challenged the prosecution's striking 22 of Storm, Hollis, Gonzales, and Tabraham, then the Ninth Circuit's decisions in Paulino 23 and Love may have required that this court conduct an evidentiary hearing to develop the 24 silent record regarding the prosecution's reasons for striking those jurors. See Love, 278 25 Fed. Appx. 718; Paulino, 371 F.3d at 1092. However, as discussed above, Polk did not 26 challenge the striking of those jurors in state court - at the trial level or at the appellate 27 level. Instead, his Batson claim focused on jurors Amster, Singh, Kingkaiser, and 28

1 Montgomery. Polk is not permitted to enlarge the scope of his Batson claim beyond that 2 which he raised before the state courts because to do so would render the claim 3 unexhausted. Accordingly, in conducting its own comparative juror analysis, the court is 4 required to focus on the prosecution's reasons for striking Jurors Amster, Singh, 5 Kingkaiser, and Montgomery, and as Polk concedes, the record is complete regarding the 6 prosecutor's reasons for striking those jurors.

7 Moreover, the court notes that because the record includes the prosecutor's 8 explanations for his peremptory challenges to Jurors Amster, Singh, Kingkaiser, and 9 Montgomery, the United States Supreme Court has held that the preliminary issue 10 regarding whether Polk has made a prima facie showing becomes moot on federal habeas 11 review, and that this court is required to proceed directly to the second and third steps of 12 the Batson analysis. See Hernandez v. New York, 500 U.S. 352, 359 (1991); Stubbs v.
 13 Gomez, 189 F.3d 1099, 1104 (9th Cir. 1999). In other words, in analyzing Polk's Batson 14 claim, the court presumes that Polk is able to satisfy step one of the Batson test, which 15 requires a prima facie showing, and proceeds directly to steps two and three.

16 3. Analysis

17 a. Prosecutor's Explanations: Step Two

18 Prospective Juror Susan Amster

19 20 The prosecutor gave three reasons for challenging prospective juror Susan Amster.
 21 2 SRT 331-333. First, he noted that Ms. Amster worked for an organization that assisted 22 elderly and disabled individuals and that she had studied sociology with the "option" of 23 becoming a social worker. He explained that, in his experience, individuals with sociology 24 backgrounds are not "pro prosecution jurors." Id. at 332. Second, the prosecutor was 25 concerned because Amster had indicated on her jury questionnaire that "someone [she] 26 knew shot someone who was injured by a firearm," but then when he questioned her about 27 the statement, Amster appeared to have no idea what he was referring to and "an odd dialogue” followed, which concerned him. Third, the prosecutor was concerned by Amster’s response on her questionnaire that she was “quite frightened by murder” and that she was not sure whether this fear would make her a biased juror. Id.
 28

Prospective Juror Malini Singh

The prosecutor similarly detailed three reasons for challenging juror Malini Singh. 2 SRT 333. He asserted that he dismissed Singh because: (1) her sister worked in a public defender’s office; (2) Singh was a doctor, and “they don’t get along with the other jurors,” and sometimes they tend to second guess any medical experts that are called as witnesses; and (3) Dr. Singh had once been held in police custody for an incident.⁴

Prospective Juror Abigail Kingkaiser

The prosecutor also detailed several reasons for challenging juror Abigail Kingkaiser. 2 SRT 333-34. Those reasons included the fact that the prosecutor was concerned with her profession as a teacher. The prosecutor stated, “Like doctors, I’m not big on teachers as jurors, if I can help it.” Id.

Additionally, the prosecutor was concerned by Ms. Kingkaiser’s pursuit of a masters degree in divinity and her membership in Amnesty International. The prosecutor explained “that in this case, [Ms. Kingkaiser] may identify or sympathize with the defense, given her membership with that organization,” and therefore would not be a fit juror. Id.

Prospective Juror Lisa Montgomery

The prosecutor gave two reasons for challenging juror Lisa Montgomery. 2 SRT 334-35. First, it was his understanding that she was involved in child support litigation with his office’s Family Support Division, and that as a result she would not be in favor of the prosecution. Second, he noted that Montgomery indicated that her son had been involved ⁴During voir dire, Ms. Singh explained that she had been detained on charges for failing to pay a livery – a limo service – and after thirteen hours she was released and the charges were dropped.

1 in criminal activity, had gone to trial, and that she believed that he was not fairly treated by 2 the police. *Id.*⁵

3 Following the prosecutor's proffer as to the four prospective jurors, the court gave 4 defense counsel an opportunity to respond. 2 SRT 335. Defense counsel offered only one 5 response to the prosecutor's explanations, which concerned only one of the four 6 challenged jurors, Amster. She noted for the record that Amster had indicated several 7 times that she was very, very nervous. Id.

8 At step two of the Batson analysis, the prosecutor must give a clear and reasonably 9 specific explanation of his legitimate reasons for exercising a challenge — reasons that 10 must be related to the particular case being tried. Purkett v. Elem, 514 U.S. 765, 768–69 11 (1995). A “legitimate reason” need not be a reason that makes sense, is persuasive, or is 12 even plausible. Id. It must, however, be a reason that does not deny equal protection. Id.
 13 at 769. The issue is the facial validity of the explanation. Id. at 768. At this second step, 14 the reason offered will be deemed race or gender neutral “[u]nless a discriminatory intent is 15 inherent in the prosecutor's explanation.” Id.; see also Rice v. Collins, 546 U.S. 333, 338, 16 (2006) (so long as reason offered is not inherently discriminatory, it suffices at step two of 17 the analysis). Any determination about the credibility of the explanation is reserved for the 18 third step of the analysis. Purkett, 514 U.S. at 768. Steps two and three are independent 19 inquiries that may not be collapsed into one. Id.

20 Based on the record, the court finds that the prosecutor's reasons for striking Jurors 21 Amster, Singh, Kingkaiser, and Montgomery are gender-neutral, such that they satisfy 22 Batson's step two. See generally Purkett, 514 U.S. at 769; Rice, 546 U.S. at 339; see also 23

 25 ⁵During voir dire, the prosecutor asked Montgomery, “Was [your son] ever treated 26 unfairly by the police as far as you know?” Montgomery replied, “Yes—I can't say that, because 27 I wasn't there, but. . .,” after speaking with her son about the incident, her opinion was that he 28 had been treated unfairly.

Ms. Montgomery also stated that, “Well, truthfully, my son deserves what he got.”

1 United States v. Thompson, 827 F.2d 1254, 1260 (9th Cir. 1987) (juror profession and the 2 juror having a poor attitude are race-neutral reasons for exercising peremptory challenges); 3 Stubbs, 189 F.3d at 1105 (juror's demeanor and lack of eye contact showing disinterest in 4 being a juror is a valid, race-neutral reason for exercising a peremptory challenge). The 5 prosecution's reasons for striking Jurors Amster, Singh, Kingkaiser, and Montgomery as 6 articulated carry no apparent inherent discriminatory intent and are related to the particular 7 case to be tried. Nevertheless, the court is required to proceed to step three. See Paulino, 8 542 F.3d at 702; Green, 532 F.3d at 1030.

9 b. Step Three: Comparative Juror Analysis

10 Polk argues that the results of comparative juror analysis demonstrate that the 11 prosecution's justifications were pretextual and constituted purposeful discrimination on the 12 basis of gender. The court has addressed below Polk's specific arguments regarding each 13 of the challenged jurors. Because it contends that comparative juror analysis is not 14 required, the state has not addressed any of Polk's specific comparative juror analysis 15 arguments.⁶

16 i. Legal Standards

17 Under the third Batson step, the trial court must determine whether the defendant 18 has carried his burden of proving purposeful discrimination. 476 U.S. at 98; Wade, 202
 19 F.3d at 1195. To fulfill its duty, the court must evaluate the prosecutor's proffered reasons 20 and credibility under the totality of the relevant facts, using all the available tools, including 21 its own observations and the assistance of counsel. Mitleider v. Hall, 391 F.3d 1039, 1047 22 (9th Cir. 2004); Lewis v. Lewis, 321 F.3d 824, 831 (9th Cir. 2003).

23 In evaluating the race or gender neutrality of the explanation, the court must keep in

 26 ⁶The state also argues that Polk failed to exhaust his arguments regarding comparative 27 juror analysis before the state courts. However, having reviewed Polk's briefs before the 28 California Court of Appeal and his petition for review before the California Supreme Court, the court finds this argument to be without merit as Polk clearly asserted before the state appellate courts that comparative juror analysis was warranted.

1 mind that proof of discriminatory intent or purpose is required to show a violation of the 2 Equal Protection Clause. See Hernandez, 500 U.S. at 355-62 (no discriminatory intent 3 where Latino jurors dismissed because of possible difficulty in accepting translator's 4 rendition of Spanish language testimony). It should also keep in mind that a finding of 5 discriminatory intent turns largely on the trial court's evaluation of the prosecutor's 6 credibility as well as the "juror's demeanor." See Snyder v. Louisiana, 552 U.S. 472, 477 7 (2008); Rice, 546 U.S. at 340-41; Lewis, 321 F.3d at 830.

8 In conducting the comparative juror analysis, the correct comparison is between the 9 struck juror and similarly-situated jurors who were "allowed to serve." Miller-El II, 545 U.S.
10 at 241; see also Boyd, 467 F.3d at 1147-48 (a court must "compare the prospective juror 11 who was stricken with the other prospective jurors who were not"). The analysis requires a 12 "sensitive inquiry into such circumstantial and direct evidence of intent as may be 13 available." Green, 532 F.3d at 1030 (quoting Batson, 476 U.S. at 93). The Ninth Circuit 14 has held that the "circumstantial and direct evidence" needed for this inquiry includes a 15 comparative analysis of the jury voir dire and the jury questionnaires of all venire members, 16 not just those venire members stricken. See id; see also Williams v. Piller, 411 Fed. Appx.
17 954 (9th Cir. 2011).

18 If a prosecutor's proffered reason for striking a female jurist applies equally to an 19 otherwise similar male who is permitted to serve, "that is evidence tending to prove 20 purposeful discrimination." Miller-El II, 545 U.S. at 241; see also Kesser, 465 F.3d at 360.

21 ii. Analysis

22 In conjunction with its comparative juror analysis, the court has reviewed the voir 23 dire transcripts and the jury questionnaires in their entirety.

24 Amster

25 Polk notes that the prosecution struck Amster based in part on her fear of murder, 26 and suggests that this can't possibly be the prosecution's reason because her fear of 27
28

1 murder would have biased her in favor of the prosecution.

2 Page twelve of the juror questionnaire asked prospective jurors whether “there [is] 3 any matter that has not been covered by this questionnaire that you feel you should 4 mention, since it might affect your ability to be a fair and impartial juror in this case?”
5 Amster replied, “I am quite frightened by murder. My first thought was how could this 6 person kill another human life. I am not sure if this will bias me or not.” As noted, the 7 prosecutor explained that this response caused him concern because he felt that Ms.
8 Amster would not be able to handle the testimony and evidence presented at trial, “much 9 less convicting someone,” of murder.

10 It is true that the Ninth Circuit has found that an explanation is unpersuasive if the 11 potential juror’s statement would logically suggest bias in favor of the prosecution. See Ali 12 v. Hickman, 584 F.3d 1174, 1184 (9th Cir. 2009). It is not clear that is the case here, 13 though. Instead, it appears that the prosecution was concerned regarding Amster’s ability 14 to sit through an entire murder trial based on the fear that she volunteered on her 15 questionnaire.

16 However, even if the court could find that Amster’s statement indicated a pro-17 prosecution bias, the statement was just one of the prosecution’s reasons for striking 18 Amster. The prosecution also proffered that in his experience, individuals with sociology 19 backgrounds are not “pro-prosecution jurors.” None of the other seated jurors had 20 sociology backgrounds. Additionally, a review of the voir dire transcripts and Amster’s jury 21 questionnaire reveals that she did in fact engage in an odd dialogue with the prosecutor 22 after he questioned her regarding another statement on her questionnaire that she knew 23 someone who shot someone else. Amster initially did not seem to recall the response, and 24 even admitted that she was “blanking out.” Furthermore, during voir dire, Amster conceded 25 that she had trouble working with other people, although she asserted she was getting 26 better at it.
27
28

1 Given the record, the court does not find evidence of purposeful discrimination in the 2 prosecutor's striking of potential juror Amster.

3 Kingkaiser

4 Polk challenges all of the explanations the prosecutor provided regarding striking 5 potential juror Kingkaiser. First, he notes that the prosecutor stated that he struck 6 Kingkaiser in part because she was a teacher, but did not pose the same challenge to juror 7 no. 9, who had been working as a teacher for several years. Second, Polk notes that the 8 prosecution struck Kingkaiser in part because she was a member of Amnesty International, 9 but did not challenge another prospective juror, David Hodgkins, because he was a 10 member of the American Civil Liberties Union ("ACLU"). See SRT 227. Third, Polk notes 11 that the prosecutor stated that he was challenging Kingkaiser in part based upon her 12 studies in divinity, which Polk presumes was because the prosecutor believed that a deep 13 commitment to religion would impair her ability to function. He notes that several other 14 jurors indicated that they were actively involved in their own religious practices, including 15 jurors nos. 4, 9, and 11. See SRT 44, 109, 135.

16 Polk is correct that the prosecutor did not strike another potential juror, juror no. 9, 17 who was also a teacher, in spite of his assertion that he was "not big on teachers." See 18 SRT 254. Moreover, it does not appear that Kingkaiser was a teacher per se. She was 19 actually working as an SAT tutor, which the prosecution seems to have equated with 20 "teaching." Accordingly, the prosecutor's explanation that he struck Kingkaiser because 21 she was a teacher is not particularly persuasive.

22 However, again, this was not the only reason that the prosecutor offered for striking 23 Kingkaiser. The prosecutor further explained that he ultimately felt like Kingkaiser was 24 "something less than a pro prosecution juror" and that she might "identify or sympathize 25 with the defense." SRT 334. He noted her prior membership in Amnesty International and 26 her pursuit of a degree in divinity studies in support. Id. Polk's reference to another 27

prospective juror, Hodgkins, who was a member of the ACLU does not undermine the prosecutor's mention of Kingkaiser's membership in Amnesty International because Hodgkins, like Kingkaiser, was not seated on the jury. The law is clear that in conducting comparative juror analysis, this court is required to compare Kingkaiser to other seated jurors - not to other prospective jurors. Miller-El II, 545 U.S. at 241; see also Boyd, 467 F.3d at 1147–48 (a court must “compare the prospective juror who was stricken with the other prospective jurors who were not”). Here, contrary to Polk's assertion otherwise, the court cannot know that the prosecutor did not strike Hodgkins based entirely or in part on his ACLU membership because the prosecutor was never called upon to provide his reasons for striking Hodgkins, and Polk, understandably, did not challenge the striking of Hodgkins, a man, in the context of his Batson motion.

Additionally, the court cannot agree that the pursuit of divinity studies can be equated with church involvement and religious activity in general as Polk propounds, such that Kingkaiser's divinity studies made her similarly situated to other jurors who were active with their church or other religious congregations. Rather than focusing on religion per se, the prosecution appeared to look collectively at Kingkaiser's activities that may have suggested she was sympathetic to the defense. The court notes that Kingkaiser further admitted during voir dire that her father was an attorney who handled juvenile criminal cases.

In sum, the court similarly fails to find evidence of purposeful discrimination in the prosecutor's striking of potential juror Kingkaiser.

Montgomery

Polk's challenge to the prosecution's striking of juror Montgomery is the weakest of all of his challenges. He notes that the prosecutor relied in part on Montgomery's statements regarding her son's involvement with the criminal justice system, but asserts that he misconstrued her statements because although Montgomery stated that she felt her

1 son was treated unfairly by the police, she later added that he got what he deserved.
2 According to Polk, as a result, this could not have been his actual reason for striking 3 Montgomery.

4 The prosecutor's characterization of Montgomery's statement was not inaccurate. It 5 is true that although Montgomery stated that she believed her son had been unfairly treated 6 by the police, that he was nevertheless treated fairly in court and that he "deserved what he 7 got." The prosecutor was not required to discount Montgomery's initial statement regarding 8 her opinion of the unfair treatment by police. Moreover, the primary reason provided by the 9 prosecutor for striking Montgomery, and a reason that strongly suggests Montgomery may 10 have been biased against the prosecution, was the fact that Montgomery herself was 11 simultaneously being prosecuted by the prosecutor's same office - the Alameda County 12 District Attorney - for an alleged failure to pay child support.

13 Again, the court fails to find evidence of purposeful discrimination in the prosecutor's 14 striking of potential juror Montgomery.

15 Singh

17 Finally, Polk challenges the prosecution's explanation that Singh had been held in 18 police custody in New York City once for failure to pay a limo service. Polk correctly notes 19 that a number of other male jurors had similar, and arguably more serious, "incidents" than 20 that cited by the prosecution with respect to Singh, including a DUI conviction (juror no. 3 21 and 15), a DUI charge and trespassing conviction (juror no. 12), and an arrest for having a 22 prohibited weapon in a vehicle (juror no. 9). Accordingly, this explanation may suggest 23 pretext.

24 Additionally, Polk compares the fact that Singh's sister was a public defender with 25 the fact that juror no. 12 had a friend who practiced criminal defense. The court, however, 26 finds that Singh and juror no. 12 are not similarly situated in this respect. Singh admitted 27 that she talked with her sister about her job and "hears her sister's stories," but seemed to 28

1 suggest that her sister did not disclose anything that she wasn't ethically permitted to 2 disclose. See SRT 204 (noting that "we don't talk [at] a professional level about her 3 opinions or her thoughts about her clients"). By contrast, juror no. 12 stated that he had a 4 friend whom he was "not in contact with . . . all that often lately," who practices criminal law, 5 from whom he had heard "little stories here and there, but not much." SRT 290. Contrary 6 to juror no. 12, Singh's connection was a close family member - her sister - with whom she 7 was in regular contact. Moreover, her sister was a public defender. Unlike Singh, juror no.
8 12 did not appear to be close to the friend, nor is it clear whether his friend was a criminal 9 defense attorney or a prosecutor. It was both fair and reasonable for the prosecution to 10 presume a greater potential bias on Singh's part based on her sister's job and her 11 relationship with her sister.

12 Moreover, in addition to Singh's sister's job and the livery incident, the prosecutor 13 also relied on the fact that Singh was a doctor who may not get along well with the other 14 jurors and who may second guess any medical experts or witnesses. Singh asserted 15 during voir dire that she had been working as an emergency medicine physician for nine 16 years, and that she had previously testified as an expert herself at a trial concerning a 17 person's injuries sustained in a house fire. SRT 203, 205. None of the other seated jurors 18 were physicians, and none appeared to have testified previously as experts. The 19 prosecutor's reason, therefore, appears reasonable given the circumstances of the case.

20 In sum, two of the three reasons provided by the prosecutor appear to be valid and 21 non-pretextual. On balance, the court fails to find evidence of purposeful discrimination in 22 the prosecutor's striking of potential juror Singh.

23 In conclusion, having reviewed the record de novo and having conducted a 24 comparative juror analysis, the court finds that this case is unlike Ali, the Ninth Circuit case 25 on which Polk heavily relies, and concludes that the analysis at steps two and three of the 26 Batson test preclude relief on Polk's claim. See 584 F.3d at 1176. In Ali, the Ninth Circuit 27 held that the prosecutor's proffered race-neutral reason for peremptorily striking an African 28

1 American juror in a first-degree murder prosecution, specifically her indication that anything 2 less than professional and respectful conduct on part of attorneys might affect her view of 3 the case, was pretext for purposeful discrimination in violation of Equal Protection Clause.
4 Id. In support, the Ninth Circuit, held that the potential juror merely expressed reasonable 5 expectations concerning attorney behavior, and that the prosecutor did not peremptorily 6 strike other potential juror who raised similar expectations. See id. The Ninth Circuit 7 further found that the prosecutor's assertion that he struck the potential juror because she 8 hesitated about the affect of her daughter's molestation was unpersuasive because, "any 9 bias on [the potential juror's] part would logically favor the prosecution, not the defense."
10 Id. at 1184.

11 Here, unlike Ali, the court finds that the prosecutor's stated reasons, with the two 12 possible exceptions indicated above, were consistent with and logically based upon the 13 prospective jurors' remarks in their jury questionnaires and during voir dire. Moreover, this 14 court's comparative juror analysis reveals that the vast majority of reasons provided by the 15 prosecutor for his striking the four challenged female jurors do not suggest pretext.

16 For these reasons, Polk is not entitled to habeas relief on his Batson claim.

17 II. Juror Misconduct Claim

18 Polk also contends that his due process, equal protection, and fair trial rights were 19 violated when the trial court failed to adequately investigate juror misconduct.
20

21 A. Background

22 At trial, one of the prosecution's theories was that Polk was a pimp and that the 23 shooting was triggered by an argument regarding Polk's pimping activities. In accordance 24 with this theory, over Polk's objection, the trial court admitted several photographs from 25 Polk's thirtieth birthday party. Two of the photographs showed Polk with an older, stylishly 26
27
28

1 dressed man, one of which featured Polk and the man sitting in the back of a limousine.⁷
2 It turned out that the older man was a pimp named “Fillmore Slim, who apparently had 3 been the subject of a documentary movie called “American Pimp.”

4 Following the close of the prosecution’s case, the trial court announced that it had 5 received a note from alternate juror no. 14. The court dismissed the rest of the jurors and 6 asked juror no. 14 to remain behind. The court read aloud juror no. 14’s note to the parties, 7 which stated as follows:

8 I may have seen the older gentleman pictured with the defendant in the limo 9 and at the party. I saw him in a documentary on HBO approximately two 10 years ago. I’m not sure it’s important, but thought it should be known. The 11 documentary was entitled ‘American Pimp.’ The person’s name on the film 12 was Fillmore Slim.

13 R.T. 1891.

14 The court then queried the juror regarding whether he had shared the information 15 with any of the other jurors. The juror responded that he “talked to juror no. 1 about 16 possibly knowing someone that was on a documentary.” He stated that he “didn’t go into 17 detail about it,” but asked the other juror whether he thought he should bring the issue up.
18 R.T. 1891-92. He stated that he had not mentioned the name “Fillmore Slim” to the other 19 juror, nor had he disclosed the information to anyone else on the jury. R.T. 1892-93.

20 The court then queried juror no. 14 regarding whether his knowledge of Fillmore 21 Slim would affect his view of the case, to which the juror repeated at least six times that it 22 would not. Id. The juror again reiterated that he raised the issue because he believed “the 23 court should be aware of it.” R.T. 1893.

24 Defense counsel then asked the court to inquire of the juror whether he mentioned 25 the name of the documentary or the word “pimp” to juror no. 1. R.T. 1894-95. The juror 26 responded

27 ⁷Other photographs showed Polk with attractive scantily-clad women, and one 28 photograph showed Polk’s birthday cake, on which the words “pimpin 4 life” were written.

1 I don't recall. I think I just said I saw him in a documentary. I don't recall. It was 2 just kind of brief. Yeah, I don't recall if I did. I don't think I did.

3 R.T. 1895. The court then asked juror no. 14 if he told juror no. 1 which man in the 4 photograph he was talking about. Juror no. 14 replied

5 No, I didn't even mention the guy. I just said a person in one of the photographs, I 6 think I may have remembered him from a documentary, do you think I should bring 7 that up, basically, because I didn't know if I should bring it up or not, because he wasn't a witness or related to the case really. He was just in a picture.

8 R.T. 1895.

9 The trial court subsequently admonished the juror not to discuss the case with any of 10 the other jurors, to which juror no. 14 agreed. R.T. 1895. Juror no. 14 also clarified at that 11 point that the juror with whom he had spoken was actually juror no. 7 and not juror no. 1.

12 R.T. 1896. The court dismissed juror no. 14 for the weekend, and then solicited comments 13 from counsel.

14 Defense counsel moved to dismiss juror no. 14 on the basis that it would be 15 impossible for the juror to ignore Fillmore Slim's notoriety in evaluating the evidence 16 against Polk. R.T. 1897. The court denied the request, ruling that it would be premature to 17 dismiss juror no. 14 at that point as he was still an alternate. R.T. 1897. However, the 18 court asserted that it would revisit the issue if anything changed.

19 Juror no. 14 did not ultimately participate in deliberations, and there does not appear 20 to be any further discussion of the issue in the record.
21

22 B. State Appellate Court Decision

23 Before the state appellate courts, Polk argued that the trial court's failure to conduct 24 an adequate inquiry into potential misconduct and/or the receipt of extrinsic information 25 constituted error under state law and violated his due process rights. Polk contended that it 26 was indeed misconduct for juror no. 14 to discuss his recognition of a person featured in a 27 photograph in evidence because state law prohibited him from discussing with other jurors 28

1 any subject connected with the trial. He further argued that juror no. 14's exposure of 2 seated juror no. 7 to the information was prejudicial because seated juror no. 7 could have 3 learned that Polk was "partying with a big-time pimp." He suggested that juror no. 7 could 4 have inferred this merely from the fact that juror no. 14 told juror no. 7 that he recognized a 5 person in one of the prosecution's photos from a documentary. Polk assumed that the 6 mention of juror no. 14's recognition of a person in a photograph from a documentary alone 7 was sufficient to result in prejudice, and argued that the seated juror did not need to be told 8 the name of the documentary or hear the word "pimp" in order to infer the worst. Polk 9 further argued that juror no. 14's discussion with the court also likely made other jurors 10 suspicious.

11 The California Court of Appeal denied Polk's claim, ruling that under state law, "[n]ot 12 every incident involving a juror's conduct requires or warrants further investigation," and 13 that such a decision was within the discretion of the trial judge. The court noted that under 14 California law, "[a] hearing is required only where the court possesses information which, if 15 proven to be true, would constitute 'good cause' to doubt a juror's ability to perform his 16 duties and would justify removal from the case." It held that the trial court reasonably 17 concluded that no further investigation or hearing was necessary, reasoning:

18 The record merely indicates that Juror No. 14 told Juror No. 7 that he 19 recognized someone from one of the photographs as having been in a 20 documentary. Juror No. 14 did not identify the photograph and did not say 21 who he recognized. He did not mention the name of the documentary and he 22 did not mention the name Fillmore Slim. On this meager record, we conclude 23 the court did not abuse its discretion when it concluded further inquiry was not 24 necessary.

25 The court further suggested that juror no. 14 did not commit misconduct, finding that, 26 "[i]t would be difficult to characterize the apparently brief and vague conversation that 27 occurred here as misconduct." However, even if there was misconduct, the court held that 28 any presumption of prejudice was rebutted by the court's examination of the entire record and its resulting determination that "there [was] no reasonable probability of actual harm from the misconduct at issue here."

1 The California Supreme Court summarily denied review.

2 C. Parties' Arguments

3 Polk contends that the trial court's failure to interview juror no. 7 regarding the 4 impact of the information on him and whether he had in turn passed the information on to 5 other jurors violated his due process rights. See Grotemeyer v. Hickman, 393 F.3d 871, 6 881 (9th Cir. 2004); Caliendo v. Warden, 365 F.3d 691, 698 (9th Cir. 2004). He suggests 7 that such an interview or inquiry should have taken place at a further hearing on the matter, 8 and that a further hearing was indeed required. Polk additionally argues that the trial 9 court's finding that the information received by juror no. 7 was not prejudicial was also 10 unreasonable, and argues that whether Polk was a pimp was a central issue to his 11 credibility. He contends that if the information led juror no. 7 to believe that Polk was a 12 pimp, then it would have impacted juror no. 7's view of Polk's credibility, thus "tipp[ing] the 13 scale" in "a very close case."

14 In opposition, the state argues that the trial court adequately investigated any 15 potential jury misconduct and/or exposure to extrinsic information. It contends that there is 16 no clearly established United States Supreme Court law requiring the trial court to conduct 17 a further hearing in this case. See Sims v. Rowland, 414 F.3d 1148, 1153 (9th Cir. 2005).
18 It notes that the Ninth Circuit has adopted a flexible approach in determining what steps to 19 take in response to a claim of juror misconduct, and that in this case, the trial court was 20 neither required to dismiss juror no. 14 nor to question juror no. 7 regarding potential 21 misconduct. See Tracey v. Palmateer, 341 F.3d 1037, 1044 (9th Cir. 2003).

22 The state contends that it is unlikely that juror no. 14 could be said to have 23 committed misconduct, but rather that the record shows that the juror demonstrated that he 24 was conscientious when he submitted a note to the court and that he was aware of his duty 25 to avoid exposure to extrinsic evidence. It further argues that juror no. 7 did not commit 26 misconduct merely by listening to juror no. 14. Furthermore, even if juror no. 14's actions 27
28

1 could be considered improper, the state argues that there was no prejudice since juror no.
2 14 did not participate in deliberations.

3 Alternatively, even if juror no. 14 committed misconduct, the state argues Polk is not 4 entitled to relief because the misconduct cannot be said to have prejudiced him such that 5 he did not receive a fair trial. It notes that the jury had already heard evidence that Polk 6 was involved in pimping, that he had two prior felony convictions for selling drugs, and that 7 he had violated his probation by continuing to sell drugs while armed. It further notes that 8 Polk himself admitted at trial that he never paid taxes on his income, that he had fathered 9 four children with three women, and that he did not live with any of the women on a full-time 10 basis. It argues that to the extent that juror no. 7 learned he was hanging out with a 11 notorious pimp - and assuming passed it on to other jurors - such information would not 12 have been prejudicial given the other evidence that Polk was not a model citizen.

13 Additionally, the state argues that the evidence against Polk was strong and that this 14 was not a close case. It cites to eyewitness statements that Polk shot the victim several 15 times at a point-blank range, and that Polk was the aggressor. It further argues that Polk's 16 own testimony was highly implausible, and contends that any claim of self defense was 17 weak. In sum, the state contends that there is no likelihood that the possibility that another 18 juror learned that a photograph showed Polk with a notorious pimp, Fillmore Slim, would 19 have resulted in a different verdict.

20 In his traverse, Polk contends that the information was "critical" to ascertain what 21 exactly juror no. 14 said to juror no. 7 regarding Fillmore Slim because Polk's role as a 22 pimp had taken on enormous significance in the case since Polk's credibility was key. Polk 23 concedes that the United States Supreme Court has not specified exactly what is required 24 under the circumstances. Nevertheless, he argues that the trial court's inquiry here would 25 not have satisfied the requisite investigation under any definition. He contends that the trial 26 judge was required to inquire of juror no. 7 what he had heard and the impact of the 27 information on him. He argues that this case is distinguishable from Tracey, 341 F.3d at 28

1 1044, relied on by the state, because it involves extrinsic information as opposed to intrinsic 2 bias.

3 Regarding prejudice, Polk argues that extrinsic evidence here regarding Fillmore 4 Slim would have convinced juror no. 7 that Polk was lying on the witness stand about 5 pimping, and, therefore, by extension, about self-defense. He disputes the state's 6 characterization of the case, and contends that it was indeed a "close" one given that the 7 jury deliberated for five days and asked for readbacks of testimony.

8 D. Legal Standards

9 Juror Misconduct

10 11 The Sixth Amendment guarantee of a trial by jury requires the jury verdict to be 12 based on the evidence presented at trial. See Turner v. Louisiana, 379 U.S. 466, 472-73 13 (1965); Jeffries v. Wood, 114 F.3d 1484, 1490 (9th Cir. 1997), overruled on other grounds 14 by Gonzalez v. Arizona, 677 F.3d 383, 390 (9th Cir. 2012).

15 Clearly established federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court, does not 16 require state or federal courts to hold a hearing every time a claim of juror misconduct or 17 bias is raised by the parties. Tracey, 341 F.3d at 1045 (citing United States v. Angulo, 4 18 F.3d 843, 847 (9th Cir. 1993)). Instead, "in determining whether a hearing must be held, 19 the court must consider the content of the allegations, the seriousness of the alleged 20 misconduct or bias, and the credibility of the source." Id. at 1044.

21 Evidence not presented at trial is deemed "extrinsic." See Marino v. Vasquez, 812 22 F.2d 499, 504 (9th Cir. 1987). Jury exposure to extrinsic evidence deprives a defendant of 23 the rights to confrontation, cross-examination and assistance of counsel embodied in the 24 Sixth Amendment. See Lawson v. Borg, 60 F.3d 608, 612 (9th Cir. 1995). That the 25 extrinsic evidence comes from a juror rather than a court official or other party does not 26 diminish the scope of a defendant's rights under the Sixth Amendment. See Jeffries, 114 27 F.3d at 1490.

1 A juror's past personal experiences may be an appropriate part of the jury's 2 deliberations. Grotemeyer, 393 F.3d at 879. Jurors must rely on their past personal 3 experiences when hearing a trial and deliberating on a verdict. See id. at 1669-72 4 (foreman's reference and reliance on her medical experience in comments to other jurors 5 did not constitute introduction of extrinsic evidence in violation of 6th Amendment right to 6 confrontation). However, in some instances a juror's personal experiences may constitute 7 impermissible extrinsic evidence. See id. at 880; United States v. Navarro-Garcia, 926
8 F.2d 818, 821 (9th Cir. 1991). This is the case when: (1) a juror has personal knowledge 9 regarding the parties or the issues involved in the litigation that might affect the verdict, or 10 (2) the jury considers a juror's past personal experiences in the absence of any record 11 evidence on a given fact. See Navarro-Garcia at 821-22; see, e.g., Mancuso v. Olivarez, 12 292 F.3d 939, 951-52 (9th Cir. 2002) (juror's personal knowledge of facts specific to 13 defendant that were not part of the record constituted impermissible extrinsic evidence).

14 A petitioner is entitled to habeas relief only if it can be established that the exposure 15 to extrinsic evidence had a "substantial and injurious effect or influence in determining the 16 jury's verdict." Sassounian v. Roe, 230 F.3d 1097, 1108 (9th Cir. 2000) (quoting Brecht v.
17 Abrahamson, 507 U.S. 619, 623 (1993)); see Jeffries v. Blodgett, 5 F.3d 1180, 1190 (9th 18 Cir. 1993) (same). In other words, the error must result in "actual prejudice." See Brecht, 19 507 U.S. at 637.

20 Jury exposure to extrinsic evidence which by its nature was intrinsically prejudicial 21 creates a presumption that the exposure had a substantial and injurious influence on the 22 verdict. See Jeffries, 114 F.3d at 1489-92. Intrinsically prejudicial evidence generally 23 regards the defendant or the alleged crimes and is relevant to his guilt or innocence. See 24 id. (comment by one juror of defendant's excluded prior robbery conviction presumptively 25 prejudicial given jury's adoption of two special findings that supported conviction for 26 aggravated first degree murder and imposition of death sentences); United States v.
27 Harber, 53 F.3d 236, 240-41 (9th Cir. 1995) (reliance by jury on government agent's 28

1 extrinsic summary of prosecution's evidence and opinion of defendant's guilt presumptively 2 prejudicial). The focus is on the nature of the evidence itself. See Jeffries, 114 F.3d at 3 1490.

4 “No bright line test exists to assist courts in determining whether a petitioner has 5 suffered prejudice from juror misconduct.” Mancuso, 292 F.3d at 950. However, a federal 6 court should “place great weight on the nature of the extraneous information that has been 7 introduced into deliberations.” Id. (citing Jeffries, 114 F.3d at 1490).

8 Factual Findings - 2254(d)

10 Habeas relief is warranted only if the California Court of Appeal's decision “was 11 based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in 12 the State court proceeding.” 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(2). The relevant question under § 13 2254(d)(2) is whether an appellate panel, applying the normal standards of appellate 14 review, could reasonably conclude that the state court findings are supported by the record.
15 Detrich v. Ryan, 677 F.3d 958, 972 (9th Cir. 2012); Lambert v. Blodgett, 393 F.3d 943, 978
16 (9th Cir. 2004).

17 Challenges to state court findings pursuant to the “unreasonable determination” 18 standard may arise in several ways, including where the finding is unsupported by sufficient 19 evidence; where the state court should have made a finding of fact but neglected to do so; 20 where the state court made findings of fact under a misapprehension of the correct legal 21 standard; and where the fact-finding process itself was defective. See Taylor v. Maddox, 22 366 F.3d 992, 999, 1000–01 (9th Cir. 2004). Where a petitioner challenges the state 23 court's findings based entirely on the state record, “[the court] must be particularly 24 deferential to [the] state court [],” and defer to its factual findings unless it is “convinced 25 that an appellate panel, applying the normal standards of appellate review, could not 26 reasonably conclude that the finding is supported by the record.” Maxwell v. Roe, 628 F.3d 27 486, 500 (9th Cir. 2010) (quoting Maddox, 366 F.3d at 999–1000). “This is a daunting 28

1 standard - one that will be satisfied in relatively few cases.” Id; see, e.g., De Weaver v.
2 Runnels, 556 F.3d 995, 1006–07 (9th Cir. 2009) (petitioner did not show unreasonable 3 determination of facts by merely disagreeing with the state court's interpretation of the 4 record but not pointing to any material fact that the court failed to consider in reaching its 5 determination that the trial judge had not coerced the jury to reach a verdict); cf. Detrich, 6 677 F.3d at 981 (quoting Maddox, 366 F.3d at 1001) (“a state court unreasonably 7 determines the facts when it “overlook[s] or ignore[s] evidence [that is] highly probative and 8 central to petitioner's claim”).

9 E. Analysis

10 At the outset, Polk challenges the trial court’s factual findings characterizing the 11 nature of the extrinsic evidence that juror no. 14 shared with juror no. 7. Polk argues (in a 12 footnote) that the California Court of Appeal’s finding that juror no. 14 did not mention the 13 name of the documentary to juror no. 7 constituted an unreasonable determination of the 14 facts in light of the evidence under § 2254(d)(2) and warrants no deference because in fact, 15 juror no. 14 “did not recall” whether he told juror no. 7 the name of the documentary. As 16 set forth above, based on its examination of juror no. 14, the state court found that

17 The record merely indicates that Juror No. 14 told Juror No. 7 that he 18 recognized someone from one of the photographs as having been in a 19 documentary. Juror No. 14 did not identify the photograph and did not say 20 who he recognized. He did not mention the name of the documentary and he did not mention the name Fillmore Slim.

21 Polk explicitly challenges the trial court’s finding that the juror did not mention the 22 name of the documentary, “American Pimp,” to juror no. 7. Having reviewed the record, 23 including the trial court’s inquiry of juror no. 14, the court concludes that this finding was 24 reasonably supported by the record and is entitled to deference. It is true that initially juror 25 no. 14 stated that he could not recall if he mentioned the name of the documentary, but he 26 clarified in his response to the court’s inquiry, which defense counsel requested the court 27 make, and in a subsequent response that he did not believe he mentioned the name of the 28

1 documentary. R.T. 1895.

2 Moreover, to the extent that Polk implicitly challenges the state court's other related 3 factual findings, the court further concludes that they, too, are supported by the record.⁸ 4 Accordingly, following an examination of juror no. 14, the trial court was left with the 5 following extrinsic evidence: that juror no. 14 told juror no. 7 that he recognized someone in 6 a photograph introduced into evidence at trial from a documentary film that he had seen. In 7 affirming the trial court, the state appellate court presumably found juror no. 14 to be 8 credible in his account of the communications, and this court is required to afford such 9 credibility determinations the highest deference. See Knaubert v. Goldsmith, 791 F.2d 722, 10 727 (9th Cir. 1985); see Weaver v. Palmateer, 455 F.3d 958, 963 n. 6 (9th Cir. 2006).

11 Based on the record and these findings, the court concludes that it was not 12 unreasonable for the state trial court to decline to hold a further hearing - or for the state 13 appellate court to affirm without holding a further hearing. See Tracey, 341 F.3d at 1044.
14 The court further rejects Polk's suggestion that the Ninth Circuit's holding in Tracey does 15 not apply because Tracey involved juror bias as opposed to juror consideration of extrinsic 16 evidence. Polk fails to recognize that the Tracey court specifically stated that it applied to a 17 claim of juror misconduct or bias. Id. Moreover, subsequent Ninth Circuit cases have 18 noted that Tracey applies in cases involving extrinsic evidence. See Bishop v. Contra 19 Costa Superior Court, 223 Fed.Appx. 725, 729 (9th Cir. 2007) (citing to Tracey and its 20 standards regarding necessity of evidentiary hearing in case involving extrinsic evidence, 21 and concluding in habeas case that state court was not required to hold hearing); 22 Thompson v. Woodford, 377 Fed.Appx. 639 (9th Cir. 2010) (same, citing also to Smith v.
23 Phillips, 455 U.S. 209, 215 (1982)).

24 The court further concludes that the state court's prejudice determination was 25 reasonable. This is not a case where the extrinsic evidence may be considered 26

27 ⁸Many of Polk's arguments and his characterizations of the nature of the extrinsic 28 information are contrary to the state court's factual findings.

1 “intrinsically prejudicial” such that prejudice is presumed. Contrary to Polk’s arguments 2 otherwise, the fact that juror no. 14 merely recognized someone in a photograph introduced 3 at trial from a documentary film did not directly implicate Polk, nor was it relevant to his guilt 4 or innocence. Considering then the other pertinent factors, it was not unreasonable for the 5 state court to conclude that the sharing of the information did not have a “substantial and 6 injurious influence on the verdict.” See Brecht, 507 U.S. at 623.

7 Significantly, juror no. 14's statement to juror no. 7 was insufficiently prejudicial given 8 the issues and the evidence in the case. As for the impact that the information may have 9 had on juror no. 7, the court notes that Polk makes numerous assumptions regarding the 10 nature of the information that are not borne out by the record in this case. Even assuming 11 juror no. 7 passed on the fact that juror no. 14 recognized a person in a photograph from a 12 documentary film to the other deliberating jurors, this information did not and could not 13 have had the impact that Polk advocates.

14 Polk is correct that his credibility and that of the eyewitnesses played a significant 15 role in the case. However, the nature of the extrinsic evidence, as found by the state 16 appellate court, neither directly nor indirectly impacted Polk’s credibility. Moreover, 17 contrary to Polk’s arguments otherwise, this was not a close case in terms of an acquittal 18 versus a conviction. Based on the evidence in the record regarding the deliberations, the 19 close call for the jury was whether to convict Polk of first or second degree murder.

20 Given the above, the California Court of Appeal’s determination that Polk was not 21 entitled to relief on the juror misconduct claim was not unreasonable or contrary to clearly 22 established United States Supreme Court law. Additionally, the state court’s findings were 23 not objectively unreasonable in light of the evidence presented in the state court 24 proceeding.

25 For these reasons, this claim fails.

III. Cumulative Impact of Errors

Finally, Polk asserts that the cumulative effect of errors warrants relief. “Cumulative error applies where although no single trial error examined in isolation is sufficiently prejudicial to warrant reversal, the cumulative effect of multiple errors may still prejudice a defendant.” Mancuso, 292 F.3d at 957. However, because there was no single constitutional error in this case, there can be no cumulative effect.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Polk’s petition for a writ of habeas corpus is DENIED. The clerk shall close the file.

CERTIFICATE OF APPEALABILITY

To obtain a COA, Polk must make “a substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional right.” 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2). “Where a district court has rejected the constitutional claims on the merits, the showing required to satisfy § 2253(c) is straightforward. “The petitioner must demonstrate that reasonable jurists would find the district court’s assessment of the constitutional claims debatable or wrong.” Slack v. McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473, 484 (2000). Section 2253(c)(3) requires a court granting a COA to indicate which issues satisfy the COA standard. Here, the court finds that two issues presented by Polk in his petition meet the above standard and accordingly GRANTS the COA as to those issues. See generally Miller-El, 537 U.S. at 322. Those issues are:

(1) that his Fifth, Sixth, and Fourteenth Amendment due process, equal protection, and fair trial rights were violated when the prosecution peremptorily challenged eight potential jurors on the basis of their gender; and

(2) that his Fifth, Sixth, and Fourteenth Amendment due process, equal protection, and fair trial rights were violated when the trial court failed to adequately investigate reported juror misconduct.

1 Accordingly, the clerk shall forward the file, including a copy of this order, to the 2 Court of Appeals. See Fed. R. App. P. 22(b); United States v. Asrar, 116 F.3d 1268, 1270
3 (9th Cir. 1997).

4 IT IS SO ORDERED.
